

NEW SITE LAUNCHES TO SUPPORT SEPARATED FAMILIES & THEIR 1.1 MILLION KIDS

A new service to connect and guide people through the separation process has launched. www.twohomes.com.au is a definitive online resource for separated & divorced parents, providing a safe and comforting haven to help take stock of the situation.

It's estimated that over 100,000 couples either separate or divorce in Australia every year impacting parents, children, family and friends.

'Having gone through a separation, I knew first hand that there was a need for local information, resources and support that could help guide parents through this difficult time. A place where they can take stock of the situation and access information, support services and helpful tips to help ease them through the process" says Two Homes Founder, Rebecca Jackson.

'Separating is hard enough; no-one should ever feel as if they are going through it alone, because they're not,' states Rebecca.

Finding clarity and focus amidst the emotional haze of a separation is a major benefit of using the site, by being able to freely access a wealth of information, tips and tools to guide people through the process, anytime, 24/7.

"Parents face many challenges after divorce. One of the most difficult of these is remaining in relationship with their ex partner. Difficult though this may be, it is absolutely essential to the emotional wellbeing of the children. The Two Homes website is a much needed resource that provides information and support services that guides people on how to achieve this." Says Sonja Ridden, Relationship & step parenting counselor.

The site provides a comprehensive one-stop place for everything to do with separation and ongoing management as a single parent; with designated areas for men and women, inclusive of carers, grandparents and the broader community.

Browsing the website, you can also find real accounts of people's experiences; tips and advice on all matters pertaining to separation and divorce; articles on priorities, checklists and emotional wellbeing.

'Two Homes is a reassuring bridge between adjusting as a separated parent and thriving as single parent,' concludes Rebecca.

About Two Homes

Two Homes has been set up by a team of parents (a single mother, separated father and a step mother) who all have first hand experience of working through the difficult issues of separation, divorce and raising children who live in two homes.
